

PROPEL WINS INTERNATIONALLY-RENOWNED EDISON AWARD

April 2012

---

Intersect ENT is proud to announce that the PROPEL mometasone furoate implant has been recognized as a winner in the Science & Medical category by the internationally-renowned 2012 Edison Awards.

The awards, which were presented April 26th at a gala in New York City, represent the spirit of innovation personified by Thomas Edison, inspiring America's drive to remain in the forefront of creativity and ingenuity in the global economy. Winners alongside PROPEL include IBM's Watson supercomputer, the Fisker Karma electric car, and Apple's iPhone 4s.

The nominees for the Edison Awards are judged by more than 3,000 senior business executives and academics from across the nation whose votes acknowledge the Finalists' success in meeting the award criteria of Concept, Value, Delivery and Impact. The winners are then chose by the Edison Awards Steering Committee which consists of senior executives with diverse marketing, scientific, and business backgrounds who monitor the development and successful launch of innovative products each year.

The 2012 Edison Awards are sponsored by Nielsen, Discovery Communications, Science Channel, USA Today, CSRware, and applepeak. To learn more, visit www.edisonawards.com.